

Book Early For Fair Reservations

Record Crowds Likely To Tax Inter-Island Boats To Capacity—Use Of Early Boats Advised

Honolulu, May 29.—People on the outside islands who plan to attend the Territorial Fair in Honolulu, June 10 to 15, are being advised this week by the Fair Commission to make passenger reservations as early as possible on the inter-island vessels, as information received here yesterday is that reservations already made for boats arriving here June 8 and 9 have almost reached capacity.

In fact, many will find it advisable to come by the boats arriving in Honolulu the middle of the week prior to the Fair, and if a large number of right-seers from Hawaii, Maui and Kauai hope to see the Fair at all they may have to come over immediately after June 1.

The Fair's transportation committee endeavored several months ago to arrange for special steamers to and from the other islands, to accommodate the crowds, but the severe shipping shortage which affects all the world today is equally stringent in its limitations on island shipping, and the extra facilities could not be obtained.

Reports from the outside islands indicate that, transportation permitting, record-breaking crowds will visit Honolulu during Fair week, and hotels and boarding houses are making provision for their accommodation and entertainment.

In a manner entirely at variance with any demonstration that has been held in the city in many years, the Territorial Fair appeals to island folk in every walk of life and the men of every occupation. It is intended especially to attract the farmers, large and small, the stock growers, the housewives who are seriously interested in new ways of food saving, and business men interested in the development of home industries.

It combines practical education and wholesome, clean amusement in new and novel forms. The commission is hoping it will prove popular and satisfying in every respect to those who come to study and learn as well as the greater number who will come to be amused.

Corn

In looking over the corn situation, find general conditions very good. They hope to supply the local market only.

At Grove Ranch the new mill will be ready about June 20th. The Ranch will have about 600 acres corn for milling and for feed. They will grind for several other large growers and the surplus supply will be shipped to Honolulu.

Mr. Krauss

Mr. Krauss states that the Territorial Fair and the Maui County Fair have done much to stimulate production in the islands.

Kula, Maui

The Kula corn has thus far stood out against the heavy rains. Crop gives promise of a fair yield. Kula has about 300 acres corn coming in to maturity anywhere between July 15th to September 1st, 1918.

Potatoes

Several farmers have small potato plantings but after last year's failure they do not back heavily on potatoes. The local market is the best here as they can get better prices and cash.

Beans

The summer bean crop though small is looking very good. The crop may go to 500 bags most of which will be marketed in Honolulu.

Office

County Agent given space in one of the County buildings where he has moved his office.

Women's Committee

The committee in charge of the Food Conservation exhibits at the Territorial Fair wishes to ask everyone to put forth an effort to secure as much as possible for display of home prepared food products. If each person interests another the exhibit would be that much more of a success and help in the cause of Food Conservation.

Entry blanks and a list of awards can be had by a postal card to C. R. Willard, Secretary, Fair Commission, P. O. Box 253, Honolulu, or by telephone, No. 5779.

Japanese School To Aid Red Cross Society

A very interesting program is being planned for the benefit of the American Red Cross, which will be held at the Wailuku Orpheum on next Tuesday evening, June 4th, at 7:30 p. m. The first number on the program is a drama in two acts from Kapiolani's "Hua aka Puwee", "Eggs of Owl", a Hawaiian legend. The next number will be a comic opera, "Motomoto", the "Peach Boy", an old Japanese fairy tale, illustrating the principles of Japanese "Bushido", the spirit of ancient Japanese knights.

The play will be given by the students of Wailuku Japanese Girls' Home. Messrs. Yazu and Takamura, directors of the Japanese Children's Association, of Honolulu, are now on Maui to help the Red Cross drive among Japanese children.

The main object of the Association is to educate children along literary and musical lines. The ticket for the evening are being sold by the girls, and will also be on sale at the Orpheum ticket windows as usual.

IS THE KAISER A MANIAC?

A correspondent of The New York Times has unearthed a little blue pamphlet of twenty pages printed in Germany in 1894, after the Kaiser, then a comparatively young man, had dismissed Bismarck from his councils, but before he and Junkerthum had gained that complete dominion over the minds of his subjects so apparent in the last decade. This pamphlet is entitled: "Caligula; a Study in Roman Caesar-madness." It was written by Ludwig Quidde, a German democrat and historian, at present a member of the Bavarian Landtag, whose only excuse for its publication was the extreme neatness with which it fitted the cloak of Caligula upon the shoulders of Wilhelm II.

The pamphlet does not mention the Kaiser or make reference to anything but the subject in hand, Caligula, the most notoriously brutal, blood-thirsty and capricious of all that long line of mad Roman despots who ruled the world and exacted religious adoration with obediencies.

But its characterization of Caligula so exactly described the young Emperor of Germany that at first the censor prohibited it. Almost immediately, however, he was compelled to rescind his ruling, because the author insisted he had written about Caligula alone, and the censor didn't care to recognize the likeness officially. Thereafter the little book ran into thirty editions or more, since the German people of that day were so anxious to learn all they could about that ancient Roman tyrant!

Caligula was called to the throne while still a young man to succeed his grandfather, the Emperor Tiberius. The people wondered about him; they didn't know him well. But they expected, of course, that in his youth and inexperience he would retain the wisdom and guidance the imperial house was already greatly indebted. Instead Marco soon fell into disfavor and was dismissed. Caligula assumed complete control of the affairs of his empire, which comprised almost the whole civilized world, and established a purely personal regime.

And then he became obsessed with the desire for military aggrandizement. But he reigned during a period of external peace which gave little opportunity for beligerent campaigns. Hence he played at war and executed the most elaborate and ridiculous army maneuvers. He became the thunderer, like Jove; the war-lord of his time.

Finally he demanded divine adoration, and though the Romans of the day recognized his derangement, they hadn't the courage to rid themselves of him, even though his reign subjected them to the most outrageous tyrannies and cruelties, while the German hordes without were knocking at the door of the empire.

The very word Kaiser it must not be forgotten, is the German corruption of Caesar, as Czar is a like corruption in Russian form. And every Kaiser, Czar or Caesar since the great Julius who founded the order has dreamed more or less seriously of his mission to rule the world in accordance with the traditions of his caste. It is not at all surprising, therefore, that in our modern Caesar there should crop out that peculiar insanity to which his ancient forebears were subject—Caesar-madness.

Suppose therefore, we call the Kaiser Caligula. Certainly no one in his senses in this day and age would hesitate to sacrifice his all to overwhelm a Caligula, to save his countrymen, the members of his family and himself from being dragged through the streets at the chariot wheels of such a conqueror. The ordeal which the Kaiser has in store for him and his, if not quite so frank a display of the principle that might makes right, is even more brutal and oppressive in the long run. If he can't fight, let him save, save, save, that he may invest to the maximum the fruits of

Crown Of Lunalilo Melted For Silver

Robbers Of Royal Tomb Destroy Diamond In Key West—Make Full Confession—Will Not Be Brought Back

All that remains intact of the historic crown of King Lunalilo, which was stolen last autumn from the tomb in the Kawaiahaeo churchyard, is a silver leaf, part of the name plate and the silver ornament which rested on the top of the crown. The rest has been melted down into a single bar of silver.

Deputy Sheriff J. W. Asch returned this morning from Key West, Florida, where he went to recover the crown. His story of the chase, which finally ended in the arrest of Albert Gerbode and Paul Payne, electricians in the submarine flotilla which was stationed at Pearl Harbor, and the recovery of the stolen property, throws much new light on the robbery.

Sheriff Asch says that both Gerbode and Payne absolutely deny taking any of the skulls and bones from the tomb, as was reported at the time of the robbery. He says that both the naval authorities and himself are inclined to believe the two men in this respect, which would make it appear that others entered the tomb and stole the bones.

The skull which the two men had made by themselves of plaster of paris.

According to the confession of Gerbode and Payne, Sheriff Asch says, plain robbery was the motive for the theft. They had heard that Hawaiian chiefs were buried with all their jewelry and expected to make a big haul.

In the confession the men said that they did not use instruments to enter the tomb, but simply yanked off the padlock, which they said, was so old and worn that it took but little effort to break.

The crown was kept intact until the submarine had reached Key West where it was melted down. Another strange feature of the theft was that the two electricians made no attempt to hide the crown and a large number of the crew knew of its existence on board. For this reason, when charged with the robbery, neither Gerbode nor Payne attempted to deny anything, but made a full confession.

Gerbode and Payne are to be tried by the naval authorities at Key West. They will not be returned to Honolulu as was first reported.

It will be possible to some extent to reproduce the original crown from the silver, as the naval authorities made Gerbode and Payne draw pictures and diagrams of the crown with a full description of its appearance. But Sheriff Asch brought back with him

The silver has been sent by registered mail and will probably arrive on the next steamer from San Francisco—Star-Bulletin.

Innocence Not A Shield

A southern newspaper contains the following item: "Joe Odom was acquitted of violating the prohibition law, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 or serve three months at hard labor; the balance of the fine to be suspended during good behavior on payment of $50." We shudder to think of what might have been inflicted upon Joe had he been convicted instead of acquitted.—Case and Com-
